Dear Mark,

Re: Proposed new Swedish Tobacco Act

Please be informed that according to statements made yesterday by the swedish party New Democracy, (Ny Demokrati), the party is planning to vote against the new proposed Tobacco Act and vote for the inclusion of a total ad ban, an age limit and stricter public smoking rules.

According to the statement this means that the Government's proposed new Tobacco Act will not pass through Parliament and could be changed to instead include a total ad ban, age limits and stricter public smoking rules. This new development is of course very discouraging and we will get back to you as soon as we have more information.

The New Democracy is a very small party which has been known to have internal fights over political issues. The statement was only made by one representative of the party. This does therefore not necessarily mean that the party will act against the new Tobacco Act when it is presented to the Parliament.

Previously New Democracy has taken a stand against all kinds of restrictions in the Swedish society and in the party program they have a proposal to make it possible to sell alcohol and tobacco freely. New Democracy is however a very unstable party known to be a "political joker" in the Parliament. The threat against the new Swedish Tobacco Act should therefore not be underestimated.

Best regards,
